

Terms of use for electronic documentation

I. Property rights and scope of use

The file of your choice is subject to protective provisions. Festo or third parties have intellectual property rights to this electronic documentation, which Festo makes available on portable data carriers as well as on the Internet and/or Intranet, hereinafter always referred to as "electronic documentation". Insofar as third parties are entitled to rights to this electronic documentation in whole or in part, Festo has the corresponding rights of use.

Festo permits the user to use the electronic documentation under the following conditions:

1. scope of use

- a) The user is entitled to use the electronic documentation for his own, exclusively internal purposes and within the scope of his own machine and system documentation of the user.
- b) With the exception of the Festo logo, the user is entitled to use images and texts from the electronic documentation to create his own machine and system documentation. The use of the Festo logo requires the written approval of Festo. The user is responsible for ensuring that any used images and texts correspond to the machine/system or product.
- c) In the event of ambiguities with regard to the content of the electronic documentation, the user is obliged to seek clarification from Festo.

2. copyright notice

Every "electronic document" contains a copyright notice. This notice must be included in every copy and every printout as well as in the user's own machine and system documentation.

3. transfer of the right of use

The user may transfer his right of use to a third party to the extent and with the restrictions according to Sections 1 and 2 above. The third party must be expressly informed of these terms of use.

II Export of electronic documentation

The electronic documentation is subject to the export control and export laws of various countries, in particular the laws, regulations and instructions of the Federal Republic of Germany, the European Union and the United States of America. The user undertakes not to export the electronic documentation to countries or to natural or legal persons to which export bans apply in accordance with the applicable export control and export laws, regulations or instructions.

III Versions / further developments

Festo products are subject to ongoing hardware and software development. The hardware and, if applicable, the software version of the product can be found on the product nameplate. Festo does not guarantee that the electronic documentation corresponds to every hardware and software version of the product.